The Indiana Daily Student has been changing the lives of student journalists for 150 years. Here’s how you can keep it going into the future.

Alumni and friends of the Indiana Daily Student have launched the Indiana Daily Student Legacy Fund to raise $150,000 to support editorial operations at Indiana University student publications, including the IDS, Arbutus and Inside magazine. Your tax-deductible donation will help carry forward the decades-long tradition of excellence in student media at IU by providing support for initiatives such as:

Training opportunities for student journalists

Here we put some stuff about training opps at the IDS

This is an example of a headline we would have here of some cool coverage

This is another cool thing we did aat some point

Development of new story forms that will keep content lively as journalism continues to change

Here’s a story with some awesome graphics

Here’s a story with some really innovative stuff, like seriously we’re talking cutting edge

This is some rad video content because we like multimedia

Travel expenses so student journalists can cover major events

Here’s some inauguration coverage

This one time the basketball team went like really far away for a game and we covered it

Here’s something else we travelled for

Need-based scholarships and other financial aid so that students can devote time to journalism

If there’s nothing we can link to here we can just do this

Write a graf about what amount of time some students put into the ids and put it here

Or have a quote from a student idk honestly

Consider donating to the IDS Legacy Fund today.
